II. Needs Assessment & Data Collection- Superior Court of California, County of Los Angeles

The demographic diversity and size of Los Angeles County presents the Court with unique challenges in meeting the language needs of its LEP users. The Court has 36 locations dispersed throughout the more than 4,000 square miles comprising Los Angeles County. The County’s approximately 10 million residents speak over 224 different languages. There are 140 distinct cultures in Los Angeles County and 55% of County residents report speaking a language other than English. Of that number, 27% say they speak English less than very well. Moreover, the language needs vary from year to year as the population shifts.

Each year, 92% of the Court’s interpreter requests are for Spanish interpreters. Requests for interpreters in Korean, Mandarin, Armenian (Eastern), Vietnamese, and other languages comprise another eight percent (8%) of the Court’s requests for interpreter services. To identify emerging demographic trends through Los Angeles County and project language needs, the Court considers census information, feedback from its community outreach activities, and information provided by legal service providers and other community-based non-profit organizations. The Court closely monitors the requests for interpreter services in court proceedings and adjusts its interpreter staffing needs accordingly.

The Court also actively participates in the language needs assessment the Judicial Council of California conducts every five years in compliance with Government Code section 68563. As part of that assessment, the Court provides the Judicial Council information about the language needs of court users in Los Angeles County. The Judicial Council compiles and analyzes that information for all 58 trial courts in the state and submits a report to the Legislature.

III. Spoken Language Resources

A. Court Employees Are an Integral Part of the Court's Language Services

The robust demographic diversity among the almost 10 million residents in Los Angeles County affords the Court the opportunity to employ a representative workforce. Consequently, many of its employees possess the language skills necessary to serve LEP court users.

1. COURT INTERPRETER QUALIFICATIONS

The Court employs approximately 300 California certified or registered court interpreters to interpret court proceedings. They undergo rigorous testing of their proficiency in English and their target language(s). They are also required to take an ethics class for certification and complete 30 hours of continuing education every 24 months. They fulfill other certification/registration requirements and are bound by a professional Code of Ethics. The Court also contracts with independent court interpreters to supplement its workforce.

If diligent efforts fail to identify a certified or registered court interpreter, Government Code 68561(c) authorizes the Court to use provisionally qualified interpreters. Before the Court uses such an interpreter, Rule 2.893 of the California Rules of Court requires the Court to inquire into the interpreters' skills, professional experience, and potential conflicts of interest to make a finding of the individuals' suitability to interpret. After doing so, the Presiding Judge or his/her designee provisionally qualifies an individual to interpret in a court proceeding.

2. BILINGUAL EMPLOYEES AND VOLUNTEERS

The Court identifies employees with bilingual language skills, tests their foreign language proficiency, and certifies them as bilingual. Once designated as bilingual proficient, the Court compensates those employees for the language services they provide while carrying out their duties at points of contact with the public.

Volunteers and interns further expand the Court's language resources. For that purpose, the Court proactively recruits interns and volunteers with language skills to assist LEP Court users at its court-based Self-Help Centers. The Court's award-winning California JusticeCorps program, a public service fellowship that trains college students and graduates to assist self-represented litigants with navigating the court system, has been a particularly effective and valuable source of qualified, dedicated, bilingual volunteers.

IV. Language Assistance Resources

A. Interpreters in the Courtroom

1. Providing Interpreters in the Courtroom

The Court provides spoken-language certified/registered Court Interpreters or provisionally qualified interpreters free of charge to LEP court users in court proceedings in all case types.

The Court assigns Spanish interpreters to courtrooms adjudicating Criminal, Juvenile, Traffic, Family Law, Probate, Mental Health, Unlawful Detainer, Small Claims and other Limited Civil cases.

2. Determining Need for Interpreter in a Court Proceeding

The Court provides multiple opportunities for LEP individuals to identify their need for language services before they appear in court. LEP court users with Unlawful Detainer, Small Claims, Family Law, Probate, Traffic and other Civil cases who speak a language other than Spanish, can request an interpreter in advance of their hearing, through the Court's web portal. The portal is accessible at lacourt.org. The Court assigns Spanish-speaking interpreters to the courtrooms handling these case types so Spanish-speaking LEP individuals do not need to schedule an interpreter.

When an LEP individual first appears in the courtroom, judicial officers will determine whether the individual requires an interpreter. Pursuant to Standard 2.10 of California's Standards of Judicial Administration, the judicial officer will typically examine the party or witness to determine whether an interpreter is needed when: (1) a party or counsel requests such examination or (2) it appears to the judicial officer that the party or witness may not understand or speak English well enough to participate effectively in the proceedings.

B. Language Services Outside the Courtroom

The Court assigns bilingual-certified employees to points of public contact including the use of audio remote telephonic interpreter services to assist LEP persons calling the Court. The Court supplies employees at its public counters with "I Speak" cards to help LEP court users identify the language they speak. The Court also provides its employees access to glossaries of legal terms in: Arabic, Western Armenian, Hindi, Hmong, Mien, Punjabi, Romanian, Russian, Spanish, Urdu, and Vietnamese on the Court's internal website.

In response to the prodigious language diversity in Los Angeles County, when bilingual staff is not available to assist an LEP court user at a public counter, the Court provides audio remote telephonic interpreter assistance using the services of an outside language provider.

The Court seeks to facilitate communication with LEP individuals by providing them linguistically appropriate services such as:

- Staffing Self-Help Centers throughout the County with bilingual employees, interns, and volunteers who assist LEP persons in various languages. The Centers may also use audio remote telephonic language services to assist LEP court users;
- Conducting workshops to educate and assist court users regarding dissolution, responses to domestic violence restraining orders, and family law judgments in English and Spanish;
- Assigning bilingual employees to assist with administrative functions for custody and visitation matters in family law cases;
- Having Self-Help Center staff conduct joint workshops with community service providers serving LEP populations;
- Providing online automated assistance to traffic litigants using state-of-the-art text-to-speech technology in the top five languages in which the Court receives requests for interpreters;
- Linking the Court's website to key Judicial Council Self-Help information and forms in Spanish, Korean, Armenian (Eastern), Chinese, Vietnamese and other languages;
- Having a Traffic Interactive Payment System (TIPS) telephone line in Spanish; and
- Translating the Language Access webpage on lacourt.org in our top five languages.

C. Translated Forms and Documents

Making commonly used forms and documents accessible to LEP individuals facilitates access to court services and enables LEP Court users to understand and participate more effectively in the judicial process. To that end, the Judicial Council maintains a Self-Help information webpage in multiple languages, which includes instructional and informational material on a variety of case types. This website also offers translated forms that the Court makes available at its Self-Help Centers.

Additionally, to facilitate communication with LEP court users, the Court:

- Includes jury summons information and telephonic information about jury services in Spanish.
- Provides its courtroom staff continuance forms in Spanish, Korean, Armenian (Eastern), Chinese, and Vietnamese to enable them to provide basic information to litigants.
- Provides instruction in Spanish when logging into LACourtConnect.
- Posts signs in Spanish, Korean, Armenian (Eastern), Chinese and Vietnamese informing LEP court users about the availability of interpreter services (free of charge) at building entrances.
- Posts court closure signs in Spanish, Korean, Armenian (Eastern), Chinese, and Vietnamese; and
- Maintains a complaint form for language services on its website in Spanish, Korean, Armenian (Eastern), Chinese, and Vietnamese.

V. Judicial and Court Staff Training

At this time, those educational opportunities include:

Additionally, the California Center for Judicial Education and Research develops specialized training for judicial officers. The Language Access Plan Implementation Task Force and the Court Interpreter Advisory Panel also developed training, including a video advising judicial officers on how to appoint spoken language interpreters in trial court proceedings. This video is also available on the Court's Digital Library for judicial officers.

VI. Public Outreach and Education

Court leaders engage in community outreach and education to communicate the various services available to all language speakers. Outreach and education efforts include:

- Collaboration with governmental agencies, public and private educational institutions, and legal service organizations that serve immigrant and foreign language communities;
- Outreach meetings with community service providers such as Legal Aid Foundation of Los Angeles, Neighborhood Legal Services, Bet Tzedek, Public Counsel, etc.; and

- Review of feedback from LEP communities in Los Angeles County;
- Assessment of whether Court staff adequately understands LEP policies and procedures and how to carry them out; and
- Review of feedback from court employee training sessions.
